

What happens to all the question responses?

Each the end of each day, robo-wizardry turns the Teacher Tapp questions you answered into useful information. As a team, one of our beliefs is that clearly presented information about things teachers want to know will help develop schools, the systems, and - most importantly - the teaching profession. So a straightforward analysis of results will be auto-created every day and uploaded to the app so that users can see it after completing the next survey. We will also be writing regular blogs, showing deeper analysis of the answers and starting to uncover the reality of what is happening in schools and how teachers really think and act. During the Beta Testing period we will also be trialling different ways of presenting information, including Instagram and Twitter posts. We'd love your feedback on how you think we should be presenting information to help you more.